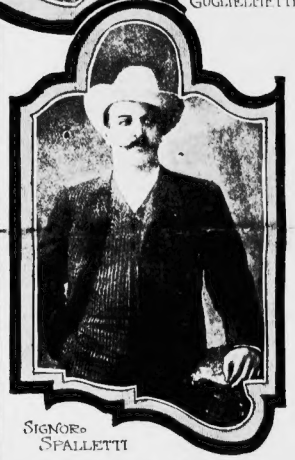
SMOTHERED TO DEATH by the PERFUME of ROSES

THE MARCHIONESS GUGLIELMETTI.



SIGNOR SPALLETTI

Strangest Murder Mystery of Modern Times

CONCIERGE'S LODGE OF THE VILLA GUGLIELMETTI.

PERHAPS the most extraordinary homicide case in all the world's history is about to come before the courts of Italy, and the fate of the Marchioness Guglielmetti hangs upon the demonstration of whether it is possible for a human being to be smothered to death by the poisonous exhalations of flowers.

Signor Spalletti, a well-known tenor, who was engaged to sing next season in New York, and the young Marchioness Guglielmetti were found dead, locked in the conservatory of the Guglielmetti villa, on the outskirts of Rome. There was no sign of violence or poison when the bodies were found in the morning, but the doors of the conservatory were locked on the outside, and the authorities were struck by the overpowering reek of the vegetation in the crowded conservatory. Especially noticeable was the heavy odor of various roses, with which the room was filled.

It speedily became known that the stepmother of the dead Marchioness, who is one of the wealthiest aristocrats of Rome, knew about the young lovers and hated young Spalletti because he had little more than his splendid voice and good looks.

It seems that the tenor called secretly that evening and was met and ushered into the conservatory by the girl. Either the Marchioness heard them talking or saw them enter, because she locked the conservatory door on the outside. The public prosecutor will not attempt to put the Marchioness Guglielmetti on trial for murder, because it is not believed that she had the remotest suspicion that she was sealing the death warrant of Signor Spalletti and her stepdaughter, the young Marchioness Guglielmetti, when she turned the key in the conservatory door.

Her purpose was to embarrass, scandalize and expose the lovers by putting them in a compromising position, with the full expectation that they would soon call for aid. But if it can be proved that the lovers fell asleep under the insidious narcotic of the heavy fragrance of the conservatory, and, finally, their lives were quenched by poisons of the flowers, then the Marchioness becomes guilty under the Italian law, not of murder, but of manslaughter.

Investigations already begun by the government prosecutor show that nearly all plants and flowers exhale day and night poisonous gases, but at night they are much more dangerous than in the day.

A glass showcase has been experimented by the prosecution, who have made it airtight and so constructed it that it can be filled with roses such as crowded the conservatory on the mysterious night. These can be quickly inserted and withdrawn, and there is also a place for inserting animals.

Placed in the bright sunlight, a small dog, though very uncomfortable, lived and remained conscious in spite of the exhalations of the flowers from noon till dusk. Then after a few struggles he became insensible, and an hour later was removed nearly dead. Administration of oxygen saved the dog's life.

The glass case was then opened and thoroughly aired and the second experiment made in darkness. A second

HEALTH RESORTS ABOVE THE CLOUDS.

French Physicians Now Sending Patients Up in Balloon Sanataria Where the Air is Free from Microbes and Dust.

THE Academy of Sciences of Paris has been called to the efficacy of ballooning by sanitarium, followed by two weeks on the earth somewhere in the mountains, and then a final three weeks in the air again, will be the severest thing given to curing tuberculosis of the lungs.

Considering the enormous quantity of dust everywhere and the damage it can do to the delicate lining of the lungs, it would seem astonishing that we do not all choke up and die inside of a year. We would, indeed, if it were not for certain marvelous dust-catching and ejecting devices on the way to the lung as well as a lot of depository nooks and crevets for the storage of rubbish in the lungs and a set of filters for keeping the germs and impurities from getting into the blood.

The nose, with its sticky mucous lining and interiors or halrs, acts as a trap for very large pieces of dust, and sneezes in addition a certain amount of smaller dust particles and germs. The throat catches some more, and the breathing tubes lead ing to the lungs proper contain large quantities.

The surfaces of these tubes are lined with countless little cells with moving hairlike tops.

The remarkable thing about these cells is the agility of the little hairlike filaments. These filaments move slowly downward toward the lungs and then suddenly snap backward, repeating the proceeding over and over without stopping from the day of birth until death, and, strange enough, even for some time after. Germs and dust falling on these cells get no rest or chance to settle down and do damage. They are snapped from one cell to another together with secretions from the membranes until they reach the throat. When a large enough quantity of the rubbish has been collected, a slight cough or clearing of the throat rids us of it.

Though the filaments or cilia never cease moving in rhythmical waves during life, their action is very much slower during sleep.

During violent activity they work fast est, and early morning is a busy time for them. During the night germs and mucus accumulate slowly until we wake up. With renewed activity of the body, the ciliated cells horribly pass it all up to the throat where it causes the tickling and hacking which most of us experience before meal time.

But in spite of these warders great quantities of dust and germs, too, find lodgment in the delicate membrane of the lung itself. But the very same as in many other ways, has the power of adapting itself to unusual and even harmful conditions.

In fact the lungs of miners and persons who live under ordinary conditions show what the lung manages to endure and still do its work.

The lungs of animals which have lived in the city are of a dark, dusty brown color. Those who live in very smoky cities like London and Pittsburg are black in spots and a many darker brown throughout. This is true also of the lungs of many animals kept in the city, such as cats and guinea pigs.

These animals taken for experiment in the sky with the lung parasites and later killed and dissected have shown that the permanently pure air in the higher altitudes reached by the balloons has permitted the lung to clean itself and return to the pink color which is theoretically its normal tint, but which conditions never allow it to assume on earth.

At the top of this page is illustrated the great bank of dust and germs which adhere over every city of any size in the world. From a distance the cloud is seen to be but as a haze on a clear day, at other times as a fog.

It is hoped that time will soon day come when every city worthy of the name will be cleaned, not with the brush and sweeper, but with a powerful hose, as has been done in parts of Paris for so many years.

This will eliminate a considerable part of the worst kind of dust. The change in the structure of country roads will prevent another considerable percentage.

The atmosphere can be still further relieved by changes in the machinery and equipment in mills and factories. Most processes of manufacture are accompanied by a trituration and pulverization of various substances.

A simple flow of mineral, vegetable and animal dust escapes from the windows and doors of these factories. This dust being either in the form of fine fibres of wool, felt, cotton, etc., or of sharp cornered minerals, the effect is particularly irritating to the mucous membrane.

Dust catching devices should be installed wherever needed. The sources of artificial dust are without number, one after the other they must be sought out and remedied.

No matter from what direction the wind is every part of the city gets the output of a vast number of stacks and chimneys. The ourskirts form a ring of chimneys so that there is always smoke dust in the wind.

The smoke nuisance has been attacked already and partially conquered. Anthracite is less offensive than soft coal, which has come to a considerable extent barred from use in the cities. Electrification of the elevated roads has helped and the same change in freight and passenger railroads in and near the cities will greatly help. The time must come when all power in the cities will be electric, transmitted from water power stations far outside the limits.

All these methods are in the way of preventing the arising of dust. At the same time we may escape dust by removing our dust-producing industries to parts of the country where there is nobody save those engaged in these industries. By living high up in our cities we escape a great part of the most malignant dust, and by sleeping in the country we escape still more.

GETTING TH[illegible]LLOONS READY TO TAKE UP P[illegible]R THEIR DAILY TRIP ABOVE DISEASE GERMS AND DUST.

Nearly every day, and due to one-half dozen balloons ascend from the Aero Club, and in each basket there is at least one lung patient. Some of the balloons are the regulation type and have been well known for years, but others are small and inexpensive. One of these shown in the page is made of the commonplace gas bags, which support a long, broad wicker basket, on which two light cushions for the patients and one chair for a doctor and cook stand at enclosed in the wicker walls from the elements.

The attention of the Parisian scientists is expected that a month in a balloon

In a balloon we escape all save the fine and harmless meteoric dust which is perpetually descending from beyond the atmosphere, and this nobody needs to avoid.

Smothered to Death by the Perfume of Roses.

ing was placed among the roses, and the case made airtight again. An hour later the experimenters returned to see how things were going. To their surprise the dog was dead.

The explanation seems to be that plants, especially flowering kinds related to the rose, breathe in oxygen and give off carbonic acid gas day and night, just as human beings and other animals do. A room crowded with plants is as unhealthy for a person as one crowded with human beings, as far as breathing is concerned. This is true in the daytime, but much more so at night.

Under the influence of light on the leaves of plants a peculiar reverse process goes on, which in a small way offsets the breathing process. While the light is bright a considerable quantity of oxygen is given off. With the coming of darkness this reversing process stops, but the breathing goes on.

The Italian medical authorities investigating the case are of the opinion that the conservatory was not dangerous to human during daylight, even if the doors were closed, because the reverse process of breathing gave off enough oxygen to make fain the body. A sense of oppression, followed by a headache, would naturally drive any one out before any damage had been done.

At night, with the door open, the poor was still pleasantly safe. With the door closed, as it was on the night in question, the supply of oxygen was steadily reduced as the breathing of the young lovers and of the great number of rose plants, until languor began to creep over the two prisoners.

They were found lying near the door, and the belief is that they had intended waiting until the family was all asleep before trying to force the door and escape. As they waited the languor seized them and they dozed, thinking to wake up in a moment.

The heavy perfume of the roses disguised the "close" smell by which the surplus of carbonic acid gas would have warned them, and they yawned wonderingly and died, though they had only to lift a hand and break a pane of glass to save their lives.

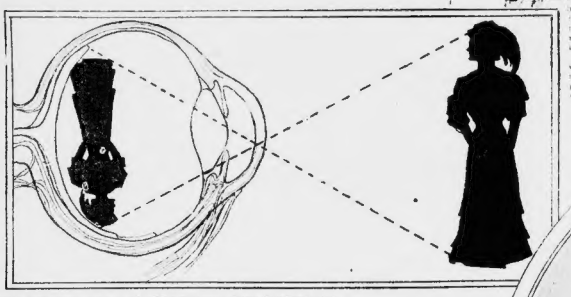
MARRIED AND LIVED 15 YEARS WITH HIS WIFE—AND NEVER SAW HER FACE UNTIL LAST MONDAY!

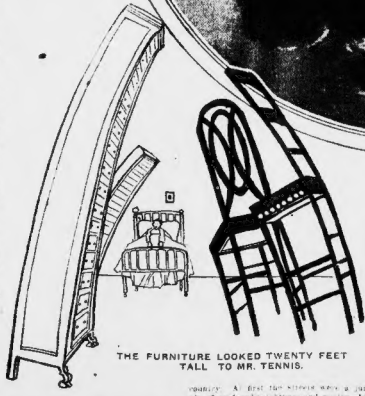
AND When Mr. Tennis Suddenly Gained His Sight He SAW EVERYTHING UPSIDE-DOWN.

"I See You But Your Face Is—YOU'RE UP-SIDE DOWN!"



HOW THE EYE, LIKE A CAMERA REALLY SEES EVERYTHING INVERTED.

Mrs. Tennis, as She Looked to Her Husband When His Sight Returned—Upside Down.



THE FURNITURE LOOKED TWENTY FEET TALL TO MR. TENNIS.

MISTOOK A TRAIN OF CARS 3 MILES AWAY FOR A CATERPILLAR.

By Oliver H. Tennis.

WHEN Oliver H. Tennis, of Memphis, measure could only offer a certain combination of headache, lethargy that nature had suddenly healed my eyes, he consulted with the profound interest of an explorer viewing a new continent. There occurred to me that I ought not to use my eyes until the doctor had examined me. I might overtax my new faculty and lose it again.

So I shut my eyes tight and dressed myself by feeling, just as I had done all my life. I had determined to keep my eyes closed until I could wake my wife and send for the doctor. You can guess what was uppermost in my mind.

"What did my wife really look like?"

For fifteen years I had lived with her and never known for sure. Everyone told me she was beautiful—but then who would tell a blind man that his wife was homely. Her figure was perfect, her features regular, and skin smooth, this much even a blind man may ascertain. But would I like her looks?

Just then I heard her voice, and then my step in the hall. My purpose was to test her of the miracle, and open my eyes when the doctor arrived. But when the door squeaked my eyelids flew up and, in spite of myself, I looked, and this is what I saw, as well as I can describe it:

Coming down the hall of carpet was a blurred figure of a woman upside down and only about a foot tall. The figure opened its blurred mouth and uttered a shriek, then it stretched two arms with enormous hands toward me, and grew suddenly bigger and bigger and bigger until the face looked as large as a window. Then I felt her hands on my shoulders and knew she was staring into my eyes. She had noticed the strange expression in them and was begging me to tell her if I could really see.

"How do I look to you?" she asked, after her first expressions of joy and astonishment, and I, like a churl, said: "Upside down." There was the chance of a lifetime to pay a compliment she would have remembered all her life, and I let the opportunity slip.

"You'd better come to breakfast," she said coldly. I walked through my doorway to the stairs, and there was confronted by object more than ten feet away was blurry a rawing charm. A series of terraces and distorted. I was surrounded by a seemed to extend downward for miles. A dome of sky which seemed to touch the colored driver host sat in a cage of laugh women. Nearly no sense of age. long small, reddish object suddenly moved, and, earth about twenty-five feet distant in ter, and with some difficulty I saw he growing larger at every bound, came loop- whatever direction I looked. There was was rolling on the ground. It

I, of course, had dreamed of Spain—the dream was so vivid and real—it was a picture accurate in detail, but I did not suspect.

I can't account for the dream, unless there were a trace of inherited memory; yet I have certainly dreamed of the colors green and blue. As soon as my eyesight returned I looked at the color of the sky and of rug and found it familiar in my dreams.

During the night I woke up and, though the room was dark, I thought it was morning and that the light was seeking through the holes in the window shade, and closed my eyes in order to shut out the light. I found to my surprise that the room was all the same.

My wife, hearing me in motion, came to my bedside and asked me how I felt. I thought I saw worry and the reason, and I knew all my self-control was needed to keep from staring at the girl, so I turned my head and closed my eyes.

Monday's visit dreamed of seeing and the dreams were not all pleasant. One of them was when placing things on my table, and he said, before I forget it, something. But I awoke myself well before I was Parallel Case of a Young Woman.

THE following remarkable case quoted from a recent issue of the Medical Record, and is of interest in connection with the above. Blindness and the Road to Sight.

One young woman in particular has been known for years, and from her early childhood of congenital cataract, which is now almost mature, Paris people to meet on the same time. The effect of the young woman's first conscious sight of the world was extraordinary. She saw everything, but there was no idea whatever of the distance of objects from the eye. Used to feel in order to get the eyes on the objects of one vessel, then in Moorfields, she used to notice the coming of a sign warning. She was quite ignorant also of common things, such as those on a bunch of grapes of a silver watch, or a common wood pattern. When the sight first came and was allowed to touch them she admired anyone she had them at once. She could single, distinguish the greatest of a street and even from the cold, bright disc of a copper penny. He was extremely shown some in a mouse or and was pleased that one of the pictures had accidentally to his coat, for seemed to know all the paints in the engraved garden of the room and such.

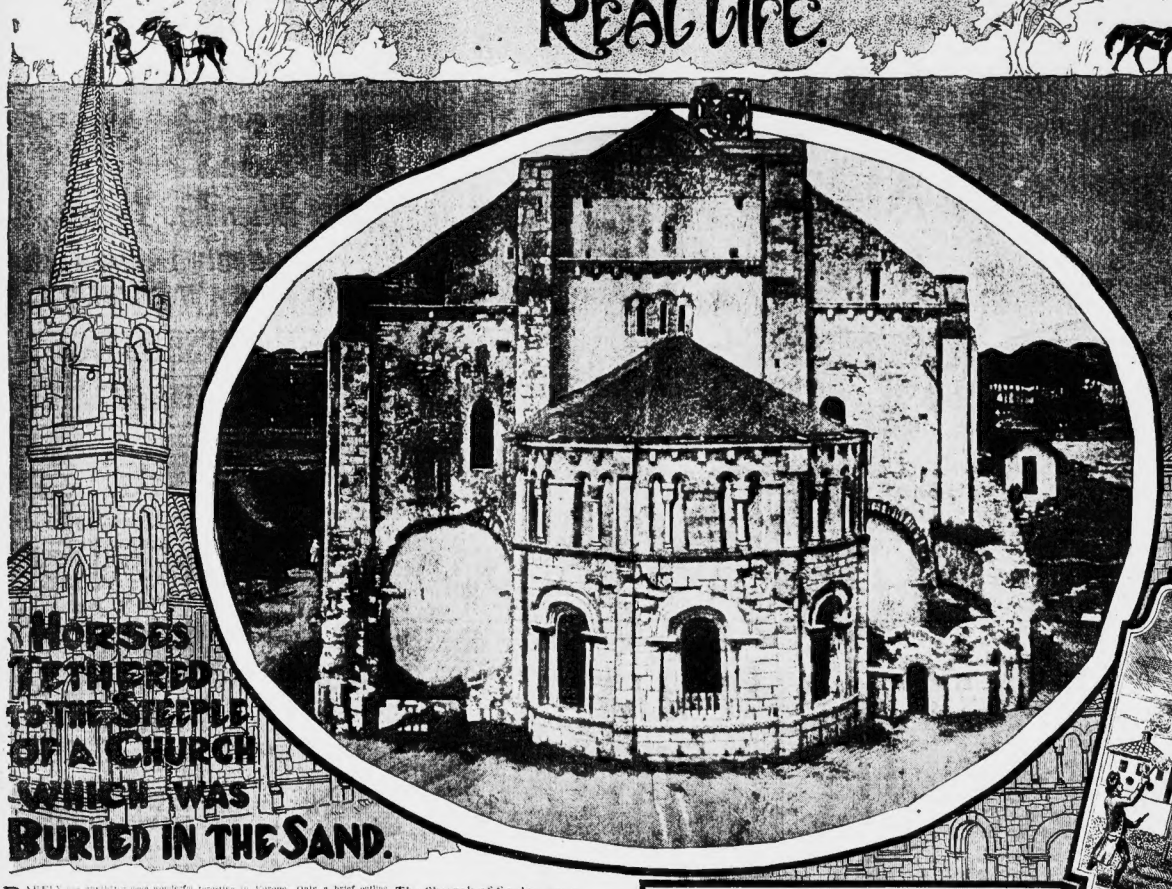
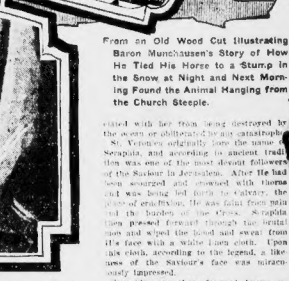
BARON MUNCHAUSEN OUTDONE IN REAL LIFE.



HORSES TETHERED TO THE STEEPLE OF A CHURCH WHICH WAS BURIED IN THE SAND.

The Church of Soulac, near Bordeaux, as it Appears To-day After Being Miraculously Recovered from the Sands Which Had Buried it for Hundreds of Years.



From an Old Wood Cut Illustrating Baron Munchausen's Story of How He Tied His Horse to a Stump in the Snow at Night and Next Morning Found the Animal Hanging from the Church Steeple.

RARELY was anything more wonderful happening in Europe. Only a brief outline and picturesque fragment than the of it can be given. The original church, recovery, as if by a miracle, of the recently, as if by a miracle, of the reputed to have been founded by St. ancient Church of Soulac, on the shores Veronica, fell into ruin in the dark ages, of the Bay of Biscay, in France, after it when the barbarians were overrunning had been lost for hundreds of years. Christian Europe. About 950 A. D. Count

The Church of Soulac is about the most William of Bordeaux built a new church, ancient in France, perhaps in the world, the one now restored, not far from the for if it be reputed to have been founded by original one, but in a better position.

St. Veronica, the woman who, according The church was situated on a flat sandy to legend, pressed a handkerchief on the coast, and in the thirteenth century the Saviour's brow when He was on the way Saviour's brow when He was on the way to Calvary. In any case it was founded high sand dunes were driven irresistibly in the very earliest days of Christianity, back upon the walls of the church by the when Prance was a Roman province. strong west winds sweeping over the sea.

About the thirteenth century the Church The waters began to wash the foundations of Notre Dame de Soulac began to be seriously threatened by the encroachments of the sea and the shifting sands which move to and fro with every coast. Finally it was completely buried by the sands, only the top of the tower remaining visible. Several neighboring houses were buried with it.

For a time a man actually lived in the top of the tower, and then he and they up-stairs" and almost hid it. At this stage it happened that people actually hitched their horses to the ironwork at the top of the tower.

Now, through a succession of interesting events, the sea has been driven back and the ancient church has been disinterred and restored to religious uses once more. It is to-day as good a church as ever, and all the more interesting on account of its strange vicissitudes.

When man hitched their horses to the steeple of the church of Soulac they were duplicating one of the most extraordinary incidents related in Baron Munchausen in his tales. Many so-called lies that the Baron was in the habit of telling about his adventures overland and on the sea, were found to be true. It was because of such a story as appeared above the snow and had to stop for the night. It was his horse to a steeple which he had tied to a stump when he went to bed.

On the morning across the Baron, not only to consider the astonishment to find oneself the owner of a village living in a church-yard, nor was my horse to be seen, but I heard him soon after neigh somewhere above me, and looking upward I beheld him hanging by his bridle to the weathercock of a church steeple. Matters were too very plain: the night before had been covered with snow overnight, a sudden change of weather had taken place, I had sunk down to the earth with the cold, sleep, gently, and in the same proportion as the snow had melted away; and what in the dusk I had taken for a stump of a little tree appearing above the snow, to which I had tied my horse, proved to have been the cross, or weathercock, of the steeple!

"Without long consideration I took one of my pistols, shot the bridle in two, brought down the horse, and proceeded on my journey."

Thus one of the most remarkable stories of the monumental liar of literature has been nearly paralleled by actual events at Soulac, with the trifling exception that sand takes the place of snow.

The history of the Church of Notre Dame at Soulac is one of the most in-

At the end of the eighteenth century an engineer named Bremontier suggested that the seashore might be preserved from further erosion by planting sea pines on the beach. These trees proved a treasure to the inhabitants of the coast. At first it was necessary to protect the young plants with branches; in some places they were replanted ten or fifteen times, but finally time and patience prevailed, and the plains of Gascony were protected by forests of pines, shading and fortifying the barren sand and solidifying its small. This was passed for the resurrection of Soulac and its basilica. The northeast winds began to undo the work of the savage west winds and the sands began again to move. But before they covered up the window seats, they buried the church to the window sills.

Attention was attracted to Soulac, and a few Summer cottages were built near the old church. One of the foresters took up his residence in the tower of the church itself, and was gradually pulling it to pieces, stone by stone, when he was stopped. After 1857 a small chapel was built in the neighborhood, cared for by the rector of "Young Soulac," but Soulac became a fashionable watering place, and the chapel, being too small for the large number of worshippers, thought was taken of the sand-buried building.

Fashion brought about that which archeology and reverence and failed to do. The work of freeing the edifice from its sands imprisonment was begun. Cardinal Donnet, interested himself in the project, and the work of excavation was pushed with energy. Now the church is almost finished. The visitor finds it a new town but little larger than the ruins of an ancient castle. Veronica that occupies the buildings and

JUST HOW FAR MAY A WOMAN CARRY ON A FLIRTATION?

THERE are a few subjects which are never exhausted; flirting is one of them. The reason why we never get more than one has never met her outside of old fashioned poetry is not properly explored. Like Tennyson's brook, they "go for ever."

The only thing that alters is our idea of what is flirting. It used to be a flirtation if a girl sat out with her partner after a dance instead of going back to her chaperon at the moment the music stopped.

Without any thought of flirtation it must be admitted that few young men are equal to keeping up a flow of talk with not only a strange girl, but her equally unknown mother or aunt or other guardian, while few of the chaperons have anything to say to the strange young men with whom their wards have danced, and the girls themselves have been brought up to be demure and retiring, and consequently very dull.

In Europe it is no longer considered advanced for a girl to have something to say for herself, and it is even allowed to her to express an opinion, but in America every girl is supposed to be able to talk, and every time he spoke to a girl it would be something. That was a system inviting disastrous unhappy marriages on the sands and heartless flirts on the other, for doubt that one can do it there very thoroughly and very extensively, but as which prevented a man and a girl from getting together who would have long chat goes on is mostly on the right something in common with each other subject, which, however, when conversation mentally.

A little while ago, an accustomed man who does no dance said with a very wise and some one else that "one could say what one and her relations talking like jays about when he will propose and how she will answer. It approaches to that very sensible custom of "keeping company," which to occupy him except to sit out and flirt, is essentially far more modest than the and he has the whole evening in an uninterrupted stretch in which to do it, where one, after all, but is the root of courtesy. As soon as there comes any suggestion that the other person will be interested in the next step, or even an hour after the next step, or even an hour after dancing, that is verging on one of three things: Friendship, love, or flirtation in its baser form.

Friendship and love are serious subjects. Base flirtation is, in another way, almost as serious. It is a heartless, worrowful kind of thing, in which one does not like to think of girls engaging, and which ills one contemplate with scorn when one reflects that there are men who think it smart to play with girls and mean nothing.

One of the chief advantages of flirtation is that it teaches girls the kind of things men say when they are not in earnest, and they are therefore familiarized in fun with this base coin, and are the less likely to accept it as pure metal when offered to them in apparent earnest.

Many devout believers few some that is be cared to the Virgin Mary of mud and interwoven branches. This was replaced by a humble but ecclesiastical building of stone. In all probability it was the earliest Christian church in the world. The other Christians were as yet unable to build churches. They worshipped in private dwellings, caves and secret places. But here St. Veronica was too far from Rome to be troubled by the Imperial authorities and yet she received protection from the Roman soldiers against turbulent natives. She was greatly aided in making converts by exhibiting to them a "Veronica," the miraculous likeness of the Saviour.

Soulac was repeatedly attacked by the fierce Norsemen who ravaged the civilized parts of Europe in the eighth and ninth centuries. It was in a situation peculiarly exposed to the attacks of sea pirates. After suffering the assaults of the barbarians, Veronica's little chapel was attacked by the sea and sands and was finally abandoned.

There, in the tenth century, Count William the Good of Bordeaux, built the great church which was in turn overwhelmed by the sands and was now after such remarkable vicissitudes been restored to present-day use, as described above.

200 "Merry Widows" want Husbands.

With $1,000,000 Capital They Organize to Fight a "Cupid's Trust" Run by Parents of Unmarried Girls, and a Great Battle of Hearts Is on in Vinton, Ia.

Vinton, Iowa, Feb. 8.

TO THE EDITOR:

It has gone far enough. We, the widows of Vinton, want the young men and widowers of this town to know that we are tired of being slighted because there is an organization of merchants fighting for the attention of unmarried men for their unmarried daughters.

Some of us are strangers here in Vinton, others have lived here all our lives, but we intend to stick together on this subject. Either we get into society and have an even chance at the marriageable men of Vinton and vicinity, or we join in a business arrangement to bring in storekeepers who are outside the clique and who will not oppose us socially.

MARGARET BROWN.

THE foregoing addressed to the editor of this newspaper, was received at noon to-day, and it is evident that these rich and pretty young widows mean business and are in the fight to win.

If "hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," how about widows who find a Cupid Trust operating against them?

A hint of the deadly earnestness of these widows worked appeared in the local newspaper, the Vinton Leader, the issue of a series of ultimatums on January 2. A notification to the "Cupid Trust" suggested by the merchant fathers of marriageable daughters closed with these ominous words:

"Remember, this is leap year. Watch out! The Widows' club means to get busy and keep busy in both matrimony and business."

There were reasons why such warnings as this should cause something very like consternation in the breast of the gentle rigid male who comes along.

Miracles of the Magicians of India Explai

How the Hindu Fakirs Toss a Rope in the Air and Climb Seed and Make a Mango

THE apparent "miracles" performed by the Fakirs of India have from earliest times puzzled the Christian world to explain. These extraordinary magicians have welcomed the closest investigation, and yet the most astute observer has been unable to perform any of the more notable of their "miracles."

Perhaps the most remarkable trick is what is called "climbing the rope"—where the Fakir tosses a rope high into the air, holding one end in his hand, and then slowly climbs the rope and disappears in the sky. Almost as astonishing is the "mango trick." Here the Fakir plants a seed in the ground at your feet, and forthwith a young mango plant springs out of the earth, grows rapidly, and in a few minutes has reached the size of a full-grown mango tree, complete in foliage and fruit.

Countless thousands of visitors to India have watched these modern "miracles" with profound amazement, but it has remained for Prof. Richard Schmidt, of Berlin, to go to the bottom of the mysteries and reveal the explanation of how each trick is done. Prof. Schmidt, with several able and determined assistants, made a painstaking study of each "miracle," and succeeded in discovering the secret in each case, in spite of the solemn avowal of the Hindus that their powers were supernatural and bestowed by Divine gift because of their religious zeal, their punishment of the flesh and their many years of profound introspection.

MIRACLE NO. 1.

The Famous "Climbing the Rope" Trick.

THE most famous of all Indian tricks is called "climbing the rope." In this supposed miracle the laws of nature seem to be defied more openly than in any other. Everybody has heard of this performance, but it is not performed as commonly as many others because it requires certain necessary preliminary arrangements.

In brief, this is what the observer sees: A Fakir, standing on the ground, with nothing but the sky over his head, takes a common rope about twenty feet long and hurls one end into the air. Instead of falling back, it hangs there, and as the Fakir shakes it out the rope ascends higher and higher, until he finally holds the end only in his hand. Then he climbs up the rope hand over hand and vanishes in the sky.

Prof. Schmidt explains that the act was performed in the open courtyard of a rather spacious and high house in Bombay. There were a dozen or more native witnesses and two of Prof. Schmidt's assistants, who seated themselves in their senses with all their faculties alert to see through the trick.

It was about sunset when the party seated itself about the two sides of the courtyard and the Fakirs and their assistants made their appearance. The miracle of making the rope was pronounced but, as usual, the main thing on the programme. Practically it was reserved to the last. Some of the minor trick and half a dozen others were performed. While this was at a climax of excitement Prof. Schmidt's investigators entered the house and made his way to the top floor. He took up a position at a small window overlooking the courtyard, where he could observe everything on but without being seen by the Hindus.

Then came the great performance, preceded by chanting and waving of arms by a semi-circle of Fakirs and assistants, who sat squatted on one side of a cluster of burning coals. Four other braziers were brought in and a white powder dropped upon the coals. A bluish cloud of incense arose, and a semi-pungent odor, hardly agreeable to European nostrils.

The Hindu who was scattering the powder cried out something, and one of the sing-songing figures disappeared and returned with a heavy piece of rope, which he handed in a coil to the master, who poured more powder on the coals and increased the upcurling vapor.

Dropping one end of the rope, he touched the other end in turn to all five braziers, and then whirled the blazing end in rapid circles about his head and body. It fired the eye to follow the flying line of fire.

Abruptly he stopped the gymnastics and plunged the glowing end in his mouth, extinguishing it as if he had doused it in a pail of water.

Amid the chirping and swaying of his choristers the master Fakir grasped the rope into a coil and with an unexpected movement hurled it upward, holding on to the end. Then, indeed, a miracle seemed to happen.

The rope went writhing up, sharp and black against the evening sky. Then it started to fall back to the earth, but a sharp cry from the Fakir and a quick motion of his arm seemed to arrest the force of gravity, and the rope hung limply in midair, gently swinging.

The Fakir breathed heavily and smote his naked breast with his left hand, while the rope was seen slowly, inch by inch, to be settling upon his other out stretched arm. He seemed to be resting his energies for some other effort.

Suddenly he broke forth in cries again and hurled the rope, which now ascended slowly, until at last it grew taut and rigid as a bar. The Fakir, holding on by his right hand, seemed almost lifted from the ground.

"Look!" some one shouted, and it was seen that the upper end of the rope was now smoking furiously, giving off a dull red glow and clouds of vapor that darkened and obscured the sky.

Looking at the Fakir, it was seen that he had left the ground, his feet swinging some inches from the pavement. He was still holding on by his sinewy right arm.

After a moment the left hand joined his right, and he proceeded to climb hand over hand into the air. The rope did seemed to follow after him as he went higher and higher, finally disappearing into the vapor above. The rope, too, dwindled, became indistinct, and also vanished.

The vapor gradually cleared away, and the observers stood with open mouths, staring up at the empty sky.

In a few moments was heard the patter of naked feet, and, behold! the Fakir was coming up the roadway to the house, with the rope bound about his waist and proceeded to take up a collection.

The Hindu in explanation said that his powers came from fasting, punishment of the flesh and many years of profound introspection. In brief, he maintained that it was no trick or deception of the senses, but a true miracle, in that he was able to reverse the law of nature.

NO. 1 EXPLAINED.

How the "Rope" "Climbing Trick Is Done.

"YOU missed a most remarkable phenomenon," Prof. Schmidt remarked to his assistant who had been hidden in the Hindus' house as the assistants entered the courtyard.

"No, I didn't miss it," he replied, "and I guess I was it to rather better purpose than you, for I can tell you how he did it."

The assistant then explained that he had been successful in gaining entrance to the house without being seen by the natives. He had found a window which gave him a view of the court [illegible] and the tops of the surrounding houses. He saw all seated there, and just [illegible] Fakir empowered pouring powder on the coals. [illegible] began heavily curled him to whirling. But [illegible] until the rope was introduced.

While the Fakir held attention by whirling the [illegible] rope-end about there was something more [illegible] going on. From the roof of the house a very [illegible] line was dropped just behind the unsuspecting [illegible] one of whom quickly tied the end of the [illegible] line to the inboard end of the rope, which lay [illegible] on the ground unnoticed.

The fine line, unseen by those on the ground, explained the whole trick. When the Fakir hurled the end of the heavy rope into the air the Fakir's confederate on the roof took in the slack on the small line, and—behold! the miracle had begun.

To further observe operations, a little [illegible] some musical, soundalong sensation came along down the fine line and stopped at the beginning of the big rope, giving off a prodigious smoke and other numerous assistance, who chanted and waved their as a screen to all operations above. This [illegible] arms rhythmically in what might be called a sort

MIRACLE NO. 2.

Fakirs Who Walk About in the Air

LEVITATION is one of the Indian specialties, but like the rope trick it rare and shy. Professor Schmidt personally was never able to get a sight of the feat, but conducted many methods in essence of it. The scientist had his assistants tell him the levitation was done, and at last came proof that he was right.

A French traveler, with two others, who happened to be Germans, had seen the levitation trick. He described it as follows:

"There was much concerted among the principal Fakir and his assistants, who chanted and waved their arms in all operations above. This [illegible] arms rhythmically in what might be called a sort

SECRET OF THE MATERIALIZATION TRICK.

How the Boy Hides in the Fakir's Clothing. Holding the Rug So the Boy Can Step Down— And He Revealed When the Fakir Whisks It Aside chals the Fakir distracted all attention to himself by beating his chest.

Softened by the smoke, a heavy rope, supplied by a metal catch, slid down the small line and stopped over the head of the big rope. Now all that remained to be done was to haul the Fakir through the smoke to the roof of the house, which was forthwith done.

While all were staring at the rope the Fakir descended with his rope, ran around the house and took up the collection.

As far as is known, this is the only explanation ever made of the famous, rope-climbing trick. It verifies this beyond all doubt, [illegible] Fakir was indeed to perform the trick in [illegible] and Prof. Schmidt was able to see the small line dropped from the roof and the remaining details executed in the same manner.

This dance, accompanied by a sort of wailing chant, continued for a long time, until the Fakir became tired and weary at the monotony of it.

At last the Fakir stopped forward in flowing garments and executed a rapid and rather remarkable dance. He whirled with astounding rapidity, rotating his arms and robes until they suggested the blades of a huge propeller.

All this time the assisting Hindus were whirling and droning something behind their hands. At last he or one of his helpers spoke slowly and clearly:

"I am growing lighter. In a moment I will step from the earth, and will settle to the ground slowly like a feather."

As the voice ceased the Fakir took several quick steps and leaped into the air. He rose slowly to a height of nearly a yard, then as gradually he sank to earth again. It seemed that he covered about fourteen feet in the slow jump.

"Then, whirling more vigorously than [illegible] shot straight up. With his feet on a [illegible] heads, we heard his voice.

"I now have no weight. At pleasure about you see me step from place to place."

We did indeed see him apparently [illegible] over our heads, in the air. It was [illegible] ground, no buildings, trees or anything [illegible] beyond from which a wire or thin rope [illegible] been attached.

It occurred to me to use the little [illegible] was slung over my shoulder.

"I took a catapult of the Fakir as he [illegible] away from me. The click of the shutter [illegible] by the chanting of the Hindu chorus [illegible] wound my fist and took a second and a [illegible] mid-covered. But just as I was about [illegible] fourth existence the Fakir turned toward [illegible]

"With a yell he descended from the [illegible] so dazed for the next few [illegible] that [illegible] sure what happened. There was a short [illegible] between myself and friends and the Fakir [illegible] stants for the possession of my camera [illegible] in a victory for us. But that night my [illegible] stolen. However, I had previously [illegible] this, and when it developed it there was [illegible] tion of the phenomenon.

NO. 2 EXPLAI

How the Camera Betrayed the Levitation Trick

"THE [illegible] quite [illegible] very [illegible] and the Fakir [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] showed, but [illegible] negatives he was [illegible] the ground. Why [illegible] him sit feet in t[illegible] the camera saw [illegible] ground? Because [illegible] the camera exam[illegible] tical. It resolved [illegible] ners. No amount [illegible] ing or solemn wo[illegible] sight, as they do [illegible] of a human being [illegible]

"So the explanation of Hindu levitati[illegible] tained mango trick—simply hypnotism."

The levitation of inanimate objects [illegible] closed with the above trick. Though in [illegible] much simpler and more common feat. [illegible] nails, light articles of clothing and sm[illegible] any kind are made to raise themselves [illegible] ground, seemingly at the will of the Fa[illegible] out visible cause to dance about in the [illegible]

BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1908.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

THERE are many ways of looking at a great man on any one occasion and there always is room for new ways of looking at anyone we love or admire, and the view is kaleidoscopic, inspiring. The world just now studies the majestic figure of Washington and is certain that he is the most useful man in American history. Perhaps he was the very greatest. From a hundred or a thousand points of view you may study him and you must admire him. He was a rich man, one of the richest in the country. But he sided with men and liberty, not with money. The average big pocket book was against him and against American freedom, as it is against every pitchmarked man, actual REAL FREEDOM today.

Washington was a giant physically and literally. He [illegible] was physically able to bear the fearful birden that [illegible] revolution that could stand the strain to which it was subjected [illegible] and able soldier.

Washington was an aristocrat at heart. He [illegible] and fought for all of the people. A good deal of all of them.

He is the hero of the stories of Washington and every one of them will give you fifty new and admirable traits of that big, direct, honest, forceful, thinking man.

There could not be a better man than Washington to consult and study at this moment.

We are going through a period of national discouragement and depression. Millions of honest Americans, business men and workmen, have done their best, made their fight bravely and well, but have found [illegible] time the encouragement follows another. Discouragement, which is the worst feature of panics and hard times, is the American disease just now.

Washington is an inspiration for the man who loses at his business. His history will fight against discouragement within him [illegible] be a very coarse at all left in him.

First and foremost and throughout his long, hard fight for freedom Washington had [illegible] discouragements. He was one of those really successful natures [illegible] whom failure makes stronger instead of weaker. He was defeated to-day, returned defeated to-morrow, returned, defeated next day.

His soldiers left him—but all Americans were not [illegible] more than today. He got more soldiers. They [illegible] with him for [illegible] disorganized that [illegible] he had, UNDISCOURAGED, got more.

Week in and week out, month in and month out, he [illegible] out, he struggled, [illegible] and discouragements [illegible] NEVER BENDING HIS BACK.

All he wanted was his own [illegible]

He would take no pay from the [illegible] own purse, he impoverished other [illegible] AND HE NEVER SPARED HIMSELF.

Because his will and his heart and his courage were one in the great body he won the great battle for the American people. He never [illegible] worked for them as President, brought [illegible] as successors the finest men in it. And then he gave [illegible] to the American people his last splendid message of advice. Upon which we shall quote later. He stood [illegible] served, determined man that found [illegible] class opposition. AND FORGOT DISCOURAGEMENT from [illegible]

Beneath this portrait of Washington [illegible] the men that aspire to [illegible]

The test that will be [illegible] from the fourth of July calls for a man as big as Washington, if we had such a [illegible] twenty times as many people in the country as there [illegible] Washington's day. There are twenty times as many problems. And there is plenty of small people to tell you that Washington couldn't [illegible] with those problems. They will say "He was too simple."

Couldn't the power of Niagara run twenty small machines, or ten thousand machines, if applied to those machines?

Couldn't the gleaming power of honesty, slowness of impulse and courage in the brain of Washington deal separately and effectively with to-day's problems? Weed lack many of those problems if we had a man like Washington. There would not be a trust problem, there would be no problems based on robbery of the many by the few, if we had such a man as Washington, simply and determinedly, with power instead of noise, to deal with the situation.

How small our little specimilized men look compared with that big, broad, REAL MAN!

The cunning, shifty lawyer, Cannon—he would like to sit in George Washington's chair.

The dull, cold, money-seeking, everybody's-friend-except-the-people Fairbanks. HE would like to succeed Washington.

And Knox, creature of a great corporation, the graduate of a corporation lawyer's office—he would like to bring the trust-trained mind in [illegible] of solving permanent peoples' problems. And Taft, good natured and stout and worried. Unable to balance himself in the queer presidential craft in which he is compelled to sail, HE would like to solve [illegible] problems of Americans for them.

Poor, pitiful, little men. Unfortunate, great, powerful nation that cannot find for its servants men like those that worked for it in the beginning!

On Washington's Birthday [illegible] of candidates. To turn from that great spirit to [illegible] to listen to lawyers' false alarms, noisy pronunciamentos, [illegible] and bunkum is to go to a nest of guinea pigs.

Let us turn away from [illegible] to Washington. We shall fill the soul of [illegible] with some of the [illegible] he used. Perhaps in the future some young man [illegible] will turn from the rising inspiration [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] country needed [illegible]

The Washington [illegible] possibilities. Asked [illegible] PARTY, he [illegible] on that [illegible] Washington [illegible] Washington [illegible] of the Washington [illegible] Washington [illegible] Washington [illegible] each [illegible]

I may conclude [illegible] to [illegible] with thankfulness [illegible] Washington [illegible] to [illegible] criminations [illegible] warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party generally.

It behooved Democrats and indebted Republicans who find their foolish vanity in always voting the straight party ticket may find something to think about in what [illegible] believe the meetings greater than Washington and [illegible] to judge of the country's needs.

Just at [illegible] post leaves him out of which [illegible] was [illegible] AMERICANISM. THE COUNTRY HAS BEEN PLUNGED INTO THE MIRE OF TWO PARTIES REPRESENTING THE CORDOVA [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] party government [illegible]

One [illegible] Washington was [illegible] the Congress has [illegible] upon the fact that [illegible] among themselves [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TEDDY-B AND TEDDY-G; THE BEAR DETECTIVES

No. XV. THE FORTY THIEVES LOCKED IN THEIR CAVE

And there they found a dazzling sight; great heaps of gold and jewels bright'

This password the captain was heard to say:
"Open, Sesame, this command obey."
The door it opened without a click,
And the captain crossed the entrance quick
And following close his robber band,
Each with a bag of gold in hand,
Entered the cave and out of sight
And the door swung shut and bolted tight.
Said Ali Baba to TEDDY-B,
"If you two bears will come with me

TEDDY-G was so glad he jumped with glee
And smashed the limb clear off the tree,
And all three tumbled to the ground below,
And nearly spoiled the robber show.
They scarcely breathed and lay quite still
Till the robbers came out and down the hill
And mounted their horses and rode way,
Then they made for the cave without delay.

When they reached the cave said TEDDY-B,

Load up the donkeys, we'll clean the cave,
And teach these robbers to behave.
Not a single coin or jewel bright
Will be found in here by six to-night

Ten loads were taken and hidden away
Back in the woods in a mound of clay,
And the three returned on their final trip
To pack some diamonds in a grip
To carry by hand, as the load was light.

"Open, Teddy Bear," said TEDDY-B,
And the door flew open, and then the three
Climbed quickly into their hiding tree.
For down the road and close at hand
Returned in haste the robber band.
The cave was open; the thieves rushed in
And began to make an awful din.
Then TEDDY-G jumped from his tree
And ran to the mouth of the cave, where he Called out this password: "Shut, Teddy Bear."

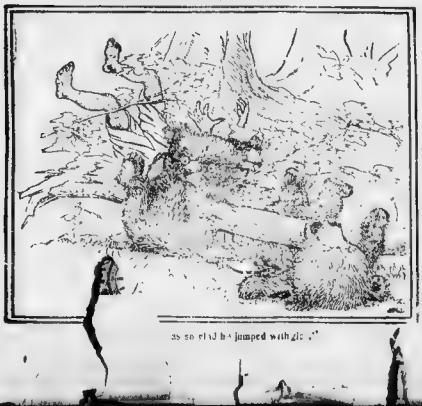
"'We are detectives' TEDDY-B replied, 'but stay right here, while they're inside.'"

We are detectives" TEDDY-B replied,
We'll stay right here while they're inside.
And when the thieves are all locked in
We'll be ready to begin.

"Ten loads were taken and hidden away back to the woods in a mound of clay."

"And the door flew open, and then the three climbed quickly into their hiding tree."

And the thieves were locked forever there,
For a cave's mouth, veiled with rocks and leaves
But Ali Baba and the forty thieves
Will be remembered while books are read
And long years after Teddy Bears are dead



as so glad he jumped with glee"

'Open, Sesame,' and then the three
Walked right in boldly through the door,
Just as the robbers had done before,
And there they found a dazzling sight;
Great heaps of gold and jewels bright.

'I know this coin," Ali Baba
As some special marks on it he spied,
"My father owned it, I can declare,
For he marked his coins with a signature;
And these are the robbers whom he was told
Who tied him the night they stole his gold."
Said TEDDY-B: "Let us take a rest
To pay back the gold will do best.

When the door slammed shut and locked them tight
Within the cave it was Black,
Not a ray of light in a single crack
"You've done it now!" said TEDDY-G.
"Those robbers will do the rest," said he.
"Twill take them just a wink of time
To add gold outside to their crime"

I've saved you many times before,'
Said TEDDY-B, 'let's try the door."
But they each knew the password sign
The name was Grain, they thought, or Wine,
Ten words they tried, but none was right,
For the door stood locked good and tight.

"Then TEDDY-G jumped from his tree."

So many Boston Theatre patrons have expressed a desire to know more about Theodore Febvre, who plays the "heavy role" there, that I will give them a brief history of this very popular and able young

He was elected about a month ago chief while a student in Berlin, stopped painting in the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris, sculpturing under the celebrated Giovanni in Florence, and graduated as an accomplished pianist from the Leipsic Conservatory. He has travelled around the world for Harper's Magazine, writing and illustrating the stories himself. He was a newspaper man on the Washington News, did police reporting on the Washington Times, and originated the celebrated "Maggie Stories" in the Washington Post. Then he became private secretary to Congressman Kittredge, then chief clerk in the Census Office, was sent to Porto Rico to take charge of the census and then to the Philippines. He was doing quite well in the Census Office, he had great experience in amateur theatricals and had a hidden operatic gift for which a stock company. He resigned his

A "little bird" tells me that in another year or so he may be at the head of his own company, under the management of a big producer.

While speaking of the Boston Theatre company, let me call attention to the fact that Morton L. Stevens, [illegible] is a [illegible] of the [illegible] and accompanied [illegible] to Mr. Stevens's good acting was [illegible] of the success of this venture.

[illegible] seems that to gain a certain amount of fame a dramatic writer in Boston must say: "I do not like Julia Marlowe." That is too bad for it now [illegible] becoming fashionable for a [illegible] to do so. I am not alone in the confession. There are others. To me [illegible] is equal to Ellen Terry and [illegible] Bernhardt. Her [illegible] is equally artistic, her knowledge of the technique of the stage [illegible] and she simulates the emotions with telling effect—to me, at [illegible] times, I myself have seen this actress portray fear with such [illegible] truthfulness as did Miss Marlowe in "When Knighthood Was in [illegible] never seen an actress so lovable as she is in Juliet. It must [illegible] however, that Miss Marlowe seems to be less ideal this year than she played Juliet to Sothern's Romeo. THE announcement that Eddie Foy is to begin a week's engagement at the Majestic Theatre Monday in "The Orchid" brings to mind rumors [illegible] comedian has declared his intention to appear in a production [illegible] in the spring, and in Boston, too. In discussing his proposed [illegible] the melancholy Dane, Foy said: "Although I have in the past [illegible] worked out all of Shakespeare's works, it never occurred to me [illegible] I began rehearsing 'The Orchid' that I had any desire to play 'Hamlet.' Throughout 'The Orchid' it is necessary for me to use [illegible] comedy in order to properly illustrate my meaning. When the play [illegible] I [illegible] to certain lines, complaining that I were interpolated. The stage manager wanted to know what license I had to edit him anything about Shakespeare. We hunted up a copy of Shakespeare's works and looked up the line in question, and my objection was correct. From that day on the 'Hamlet' bee crawled into my head, and I shall never rest until I satisfy my ambition, which possibly will prove foolish and silly. Of course, I realize that I could never earn a living playing 'Hamlet,' but I do not intend to appear in more than twelve performances, in as many different cities, which will include Boston, and I feel sure I could do that my conception of the melancholy Dane will at least prove interesting, if not artistic." Notwithstanding the fact that Foy is popular, it is to be doubted in the minds of many as to whether or not the public would accept the comedian in a role thrown in the performance of "Hamlet" without interrupting him in some serious scene and demanding a song and dance or some such act. Just the same, I want to see him in the role, with May Irwin as the Ophelia

What the Theatres Offer

Majestic Theatre

Eddie Foy, America's foremost [illegible] comedian, begins a single week's engagement to-morrow evening in "The Orchid," which ran over six months at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, and two in London. It is described as a massive English musical entertainment, full of pretty girls, in the character of Arlo Chole, head gardener and supervisor of flowers at Lady Barsch's Horticultural College, the comedian is gifted with a role that might have been made to order for his peculiarly droll style of comedy. He is the centre of matrimonial mix ups and tangles that involve four sets of lovers, and carry them all from England to New France, where they arrive in the height of the great flower show and carnival. Mr. Foy has been allotted several songs, which include "They Say He Went to College," "I'd Rather Be" "He Goes to Church on Sunday" "Mulligan Guard," and "Why Do They Call Me an Idiot, Papa?" Foy's assistants are Flavia Arcaro, Lotti Ada Gordon, Florence

On Seeing "The House of Julia" At Herculaneum

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Not great Vesuvius, in all his ire,
Nor all the centuries, could hide your shame.
There is the little window where you came,
With eyes that woke the demon of desire,
And lips like rose leaves, fashioned out of fire;
And from the lava leaps the molten flame
Of your old sins. The walls cry out your name—
Your face seems rising from the funeral pyre.

There must have dwelt, within your fated town,
Full many a virtuous dame, and noble wife
Who made your beauty seem as star to sun;
How strange the centuries have handed down
Your name, fair Julia, of immoral life,
And left the others to oblivion.

No Need for Women to Have Wrinkles

MONDAY'S BEST BARGAINS IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

This woman says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved her life. Read her letter.

Mrs. T. C. Willadsen, of Manning, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words. For years I suffered with the worst forms of female complaints, continually doctoring and spending lots of money for medicine without help. I wrote you for advice, followed it as directed, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has restored me to perfect health, and if not been for you I should have been in my grave before. I wish every suffering woman would try it."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

THOUSANDS OF BAKER'S LOOT FOUND IN BOSTON.

Burglar, Arrested in New York, Leads Strange Double Existence.

HIS STARTLING CONFESSION

Tells of Thirty Robberies Committed Between Atlantic and Pacific Coast.

METEORIC CAREER IN HUB

Much of Plunder Recovered in Hotel Essex and East Boston Lodging House.

THOUSANDS of dollars' worth of loot archered in a series of daring postoffice and express office robberies, committed between New York and San Francisco by James A. Baker, a fashionably dressed gentleman of leisure by day and a thief by night, now under arrest in New York, with an amazing, self-told tale of crime, including one murder, confronting him, was discovered hidden under carpets and between bed slats in a room at the Hotel Essex and a room in a private Boston lodging house yesterday by postoffice and secret service sleuths from Gotham

The plunder was hidden by Baker on the occasion of a flying visit to Boston last Tuesday night. According to his confession, he intended returning later to reclaim it. Today, the police of Boston and a score of other large cities in the East are searching high and low for one Jack Raymond, another fashionable hotel guest and an alleged companion of Baker, who the latter says was implicated with him in some of the robberies.

Decides to Confess.

Raymond accompanied Baker on a tour of the fashionable hotels and restaurants of Boston last Tuesday night, and remained here when Baker left early next morning for New London, Conn. Late Friday night Raymond was seen on the streets of Boston, and it is presumed that he is still here or in hiding somewhere nearby. His arrest is expected soon.

It was on the flip of a twenty five-cent piece that Baker, who has been committed to the Tombs without bail, decided to make his startling confession to the police. With an astonishing air of sociability, after being searched at headquarters, and with a cigar in his mouth, he leaned over the heads of the officers and the young prisoner who had finished, long before his story was told, the first bottle up on the floor. The result was in favor of a confession.

"I'll pay my last dollar a man," Baker explained, as the officers cried a struggling fifth drew itself up at a table to his left door to listen to his story. Then he had finished the secret service men promised his confession would be the most astonishing they had ever read.

Tells Startling Story.

The young man told everything about his career of crime from beginning to end. His story was like the chapter of a yellow covered novel. Punctuated with the grim, some details of one murder, committed in Clarington, W. Va., December 20, 1907, it covered a career of robberies from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts. Baker was still young, Baker said in the face of the all one day in every week, from December 1907, and February 2 of this year.

"Now," said Baker to the secret service men who had finished, "you do as they agree to Boston, and you'll verify part of what I have said."

TUFTS COLLEGE BOY BECOMES AN ENGLISH LORD.

Hugh FitzGerald Lovering of Lowell Inherits Title and Big Estates.

SOON TO BE LORD GOUGH

King Edward Is Said to Be Personally Interested In the Case.

LUCKIER TO BE OUSTED

Boy Is 18 Years Old, and Lives With His Mother in the Mill City.

HUGH FITZGERALD LOVERING, eighteen years of age, a student of Tufts College, who lives with his mother at No. 49 Marlboro street, Lowell, it has just been discovered, is Lord Hugh FitzGerald Gough

He will soon come into the right and title of his heritage in England, and thus duplicate in real, prosaic life, the famous story of Little Lord Fauntleroy of Mrs. Burnett.

Hugh Lovering, as he is at Tufts College, insists that he was aware that he was a lord, but developed when the title of Lord and large estates in England were mentioned by a prominent Boston lawyer.

King Edward Interested.

Determined to establish his claim to the title, Hugh Lovering will, it is said, be assisted in his efforts by King Edward, himself, is said to be taking a lively interest in the young fellow's claim, and has developed where the title of Lord and large estates in England were mentioned by a prominent Boston lawyer.

HEARST OUTLINES PRINCIPLES OF PLATFORM

HOPELESS TO LOOK LONGER TO OLD PARTIES, HE DECLARES

"Restore Power of Government to the People and Correct Financial Evils" Is His Appeal.

William Randolph Hearst's speech at the Chicago conference was as follows:

THIS conference as I understand it has been called to promulgate the principles for which the Independence League, as a national party, will labor, and to decide upon the means which the Independence League will adopt to promote these principles.

At the former conference in New York a committee was appointed to frame a declaration of principles in harmony with the spirit of that conference, and the effort of that committee is expressed in the address to the public which we now offer for your approval and adoption.

We, of the Independence League, look back as Lincoln did, to the Declaration of Independence as the fountainhead of all our inspiration, and we may well recall on this occasion that on February 22, just forty-seven years ago to-day, Lincoln said:

"I have never had a feeling, politically, that did not spring from the sentiment embodied in the Declaration of Independence."

It has been said in criticism of Jefferson's draft of this historic document that it expressed no violent innovations, no startling novelties, no ideas that had not been considered before. Most certainly it was not the purpose of the document to introduce new and undiscussed theories, but rather to express adequately the carefully considered ideas and objects that the patriots of that period had decided to express and to secure.

Liberty and Equality for All Men.

The object of our declaration of principles is not to introduce violent innovations or startling new theories, but to give the best expression that we can to the principles and purposes in the minds of all patriotic and progressive citizens to-day, and to preserve and perpetuate the ideas of popular rights, of liberty, equality and opportunity for all men, which the Declaration of Independence originally enunciated.

It is not our purpose to attempt to revolutionize the system of government, but to restore the action of the government to the principles of Washington and Jefferson," as the first platform of the Republican party declared, and to the principles of Lincoln, as the first platform of the Independence League may properly add.

It is not our purpose radically to change the government, but to conserve the form of government which the founders framed and the plain purpose of popular government, which the fathers had in mind.

The chief evil in our government to-day is that the power of government has drifted out of the hands of the people into the hands of selfish, special interests and the corrupt political bosses whom they can use.

The first purpose of our platform is to restore the power of government to the people, to make their will supreme in the primaries, in the elections and in the control of public officials after they have been elected.

Our second purpose is to destroy the power of selfish special interests by wresting from their hands their main weapon, the corruption fund, and by preventing absolutely the use of any money at elections except for literature, for meetings and for legitimate appeals to the intelligence and patriotism of the voter.

Check Highwaymen of High Finance.

Our third purpose is to correct some of the obvious financial and economic evils of the day, to promote not only the creation of wealth, but a more just and equable distribution of wealth, and to prevent the interception of the mighty march of national progress and prosperity by the criminal methods of the highwaymen of high finance.

Our fourth purpose is to frame certain schemes of constructive legislation to develop the resources of our great country, to increase national and international facilities for trade and commerce, to restore confidence and employment and to encourage all legitimate business enterprise.

How far the committee has succeeded in its objects we leave to the judgment of this conference.

Now, as to the means by which the proposed reforms can be accomplished. Now, as to the question of the necessity of a new party to bring about these reforms. In these matters I speak only for myself, not I speak from conference with, or from experience.

There are many who honestly believe in these reforms and still honestly believe that they can be accomplished through the medium of one or the other of the old parties. There is no need to quarrel with such reformers, for experience will bring all of these to our ranks in time; it is true that both the Democratic party and the Republican party are progressive in some places and at some times, but on other occasions they are hopelessly reactionary.

I maintain that there is ample reason and opportunity for a party that is uniformly and universally progressive and is devoted to these principles at all places and at all times.

The old parties are divided on issues that are dead and gone, and there is no party alignment to-day on the live issues of to-day.

The word Democracy defines no doctrine; the word Republican expresses no principle. Men are Democrats by inheritance, Republicans by tradition.

There are Democrats who believe in free trade and Democrats who believe in protection.

Party Names Gone for Naught.

There are trust Democrats and anti-trust Democrats.

There are Democrats who believe in public ownership of public utilities and Democrats who believe in private ownership of public officials.

There are Democrats who differ fundamentally from other Democrats and who agree absolutely with certain Republicans.

Of all the various parties which exist in the nation I have found the two that are the most bitterly, the most utterly and the most uncompromisingly opposed to each other are the radical Democratic party and the conservative Democratic party.

There is nothing that the one advocates that the other does not oppose; there is nothing that the one believes in that the other does not scornfully reject, and there is no candidate who is sincerely in sympathy with the principles of the one who can hope to secure openly and honestly the support of the other.

These conditions exist to a certain extent in the Republican party also.

We are now on the eve of a great national campaign, and no one knows with any degree of certainty what attitude either of the old parties will take at its coming convention.

It depends upon what particular clique secures control of the Republican machinery, whether that party declares for Roosevelt and Radicalism, or Cannon and Conservatism, or Hughes and Hypocrisy.

The Democratic party has stood heroically for Bryan and Bimetallism one year, for Philanthropy in the Philippines one year; for Conservatism and Campaign Fund one year, and for Public Ownership for part of an other year—until, indeed, that deep-rooted conviction collided with the Jim Crow car.

The Democratic party accuses Roosevelt of having stolen its clothes. What clothes?

Which suit?

If Roosevelt appropriated any Democratic garments he probably found them lying around, unworn, uncared for, unclaimed.

Reforms Hopeless from Old Parties.

The political clothes of the average politician are not much to steal. They too often resemble the harlequin attire of a masquerader. Moreover, by way of diversion, if Roosevelt, attired in the boots and breeches of the Democracy, has frightened the country into financial ills, what will the probable effect on the community be of a Democratic President, arrayed in the contrasting colors of the full Democratic regalia?

With all due respect to the honest citizens in the Democratic and Republican parties, I maintain that the reforms we advocate cannot well be accomplished either with the old parties or in conjunction with the old parties.

I plead for a new national party devoted to the old American ideals. I plead for a permanent party wholly and harmoniously committed to the principles of Washington and Jefferson and Jackson and Lincoln. I define a party as a collection of individuals devoted to certain definite principles and active in politics to promote these principles, and I declare that according to that definition there is no national party in the United States to-day. Let us inaugurate a party that is not a party of mere warring factions.

Let us inaugurate a party that will be a national party in the true sense of the word, and let us call it the National party if you will. It will be the only one worthy of the name.

Founder of Independence League and two of its leaders.

HON. WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

CHAS. O. POWER

C. O. POWER TELLS OF PARTY'S RAPID GROWTH IN BAY STATE

Charles O. Power, of Massachusetts, detailed to the convention an illuminating history of the Independence League in that state.

"Two years ago," said he, "such a party was not in existence in the old commonwealth. To-day it is the second leading or municipal party."

On July 25, 1906, seven men met in Boston and banded themselves together. On August 3 they received a charter in order that they might proceed in a strictly legal way. Simultaneously, leagues were formed throughout the State.

An illustration of the notable success of this movement is offered, Mr. Power said, in his experience at Springfield. On August 15, the night he started the organization there, only six men appeared at the meeting. But one year later, at a banquet held by the League at Springfield, 700 enthusiastic Leaguers were present.

So rapidly did the movement spread that when, on September 22, the State convention of the League was held in Mechanics' Faneuil hall in Boston, every county in Massachusetts was represented, and there were over 800 delegates in attendance.

Wonderful Growth

"In two months, therefore" said Mr. Power, "the working force had grown so rapidly that, from the seven original men, it was represented by fifty times that number in the State convention.

Without waiting for the action of either party, the Independence League in State and city nominated a complete ticket, with John R. Murray at the head, Henry Brown for governor and Thomas F. Higgins for lieutenant governor. Fright at the spread of the movement and at the League's platform among election officials in the State of Massachusetts, however, swept all of these names off the official ballot. Thousands of signatures were perfected in every part of the State and the League was on the verge of the election of the League again met in Faneuil Hall, there were 1000 delegates present, or twice as many as the year before. Thomas F. Higgins was nominated for governor.

League's Great Vote

The Democrats, believing that the League's former success had been made a passing wave, nominated a separate ticket with Henry M. Whitney, a corporation representative, at its head. Along these lines the fight was waged with tremendous enthusiasm by the League, but when the votes were counted next Mr. Power said it was found that, despite the modest League vote cast for governor, had polled 25,000 votes, leading Whitney by about 5000 votes.

The conservative Democrats said after Mayor Fitzgerald's election in 1905 that he would not be a record breaker, but he was, nevertheless, the strong personality in the great majority of the Democratic party in Massachusetts but just enough to promote the Independence League. Had Confidence of People

Mr. Power said that the people wanted business men for the offices, and the Republicans were not to be trusted. The Democrats, he said, were not to be trusted. The people had confidence in the Independence League, and so it was that it polled the vote it did.

"Two years ago," said he, "such a party was not in existence in the old commonwealth. To-day it is the second leading or municipal party."

League's Great Vote

The Democrats, believing that the League's former success had been made a passing wave, nominated a separate ticket with Henry M. Whitney, a corporation representative, at its head. Along these lines the fight was waged with tremendous enthusiasm by the League, but when the votes were counted next Mr. Power said it was found that, despite the modest League vote cast for governor, had polled 25,000 votes, leading Whitney by about 5000 votes.

Mr. Power was the first speaker at the afternoon session. In a general review of the history of the movement and a description of the Independence League in New York, New Jersey, Illinois and Massachusetts, Mr. Power said:

"In Massachusetts we have had a remarkable campaign. Mr. Hearst was nominated by the Democratic party for governor, and Thomas F. Higgins was nominated by the Independence League. Mr. Hearst received 125,000 votes and Mr. Higgins received 120,000 votes. Mr. Hearst was defeated by 5000 votes. Mr. Higgins was defeated by 5

Talks on Teeth

By G. GORDON MARTIN
Incorporated

Health and Your Teeth

Health depends upon good digestion. Good digestion requires sound teeth. If you cannot thoroughly chew your food you overtax your digestion and menace your health. Show me a man with sound health and I will show you one with sound teeth.

Gladstone chewed every morsel thirty-two times and was able to chop trees at seventy. Franklin, at eighty, was a world-wide diplomat. Fletcher chewed food to the consistency of pap and at fifty ran foot races with youths and did tricks that baffled the strongest.

Care of the teeth is the safeguard of their soundness. Many a man suffers from headache and neuralgia who doesn't know that the nerve of a tooth is the cause of the trouble. Many suffer from indigestion whose trouble springs from the cavity or the root of a tooth or from the lack of teeth.

Often loose teeth are the cause of much physical disability. Have our teeth examined at once. It will cost you nothing. Our ALVEOLAR METHOD OF DENTISTRY does away with plate and bridge work, is no more expensive than any first-class work and is controlled exclusively by us. No one else in New England has the right to use the ALVEOLAR PROCESS. It is painless and sure.

We can put sound teeth into your mouth and make those ones as firm as the soundest.

We do not ask you to have any work done or to assume an obligation. We want you to investigate OUR ALVEOLAR METHOD. There are thousands of well-known people whom we have benefited and we can benefit you. Don't put it off. A step in time will save many a pain and often an ill.

Above all write at once for our book. It will tell you facts that you should know about the ALVEOLAR METHOD and WE WILL MAIL IT FREE OF CHARGE. We will show you testimonial letters from well-known people all over New England whom we have benefited. We can benefit you.

Our ALVEOLAR METHOD OF DENTISTRY is more scientific than that of the ordinary dentist. We have specialists in every branch of dentistry. We advertise because we know it is the best way of reaching you. We do not propose to let any foolish reasons of professional etiquette stand in the way of our reaching those whom we can benefit. If you cannot call write for our book. Do it today.

CAUTION—Look out for imitators and impostors. We have no offices outside of those given below.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention—but your kidneys most, because, like a clock, do not until should have attention first.

If you are sick or feel badly," begin taking Dr Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to be well.

Prevalency of Kidney Disease,

Swamp-Root is Pleasant to Take.

CANNON CALLS ROOSEVELT DOCTRINES FALSE.

President Characterized as "Abnormal" by Speaker at Banquet.

WORDS CREATE SENSATION

Senator Fulton Follows by Calling Him Menace to the Republic.

WANTS TO FORGET IT NOW

Even Mild-Spoken Fairbanks Cries Out Against Third Term at This Time.

WASHINGTON, Feb 22—Characterized as "abnormal," by Speaker Cannon, and as a "dangerous menace" to the Republic by Senator Fulton, President Roosevelt was criticized with greater bitterness than has yet manifested itself in political circles here at a dinner given by Senator Ankeny of Washington, in the New Willard Hotel last night to his colleagues. While care was taken not to refer to the President by name, the attacks were so pointed that all present recognized to whom the speakers referred.

Speaker Cannon declared that the present period of efforts to organize and reform conditions in the country was not unusual

"False Doctrines."

"All who study the history of our country," he said, "will find that about every so often a period of alarm and agitation led by an abnormal man does appear. If the study is pursued we will find that the storm will subside, and when the excitement is over business is doing business at about the same old pace, the same old stand, in the same old place."

Speaker Cannon declared that in this case, as in the past, the progress of our country would go on in the same old way.

The speech of the President of the United States, he said, was full of good counsel, and the sentiments expressed were those of a statesman. He has been charged by the enemies of the administration with having political ambitions in connection with the present movement. He is a candidate for reelection for another term on the issues and upon the evidence of fact that none of the seven men's expected will come out right in the end. He is one of reelection if the people think he is one to Washington.

Stirs Up Senators.

While Speaker Cannon's attack was a surprise, the bitter attack upon the President by Senator Fulton of Oregon, which has already aroused great indignation in the President and has been one of his constant topics of conversation in the Senate, and several of the enemies of the administration have been heard to say that they were awake.

The speech was a private affair, and enemies of the President are referring to the President as an example of the President's own friends feel toward him when they get together.

Fulton's attack was the chief topic in both the Republican and Democratic cloak rooms in the late so-day.

Cries "Domination."

Senator Fulton is understood to have called upon the Republican Senators present to plead him to prevent the President from dictating his successor to the Republican national convention in the coming fall.

He declared that the Republican party was face to face with the greatest crisis in its history. That unless the people of the Republican party rallied at once the country was doomed to be governed in the future by the whims of one man as it would require two years for the people to see the damage the business and the politics of the country had done to the Republican party and then it could not be undone in a single man to rule both the party and the country, after he has retired from office."

Wants to Forget It.

Senator Fulton would not discuss the speech to-day, in fact, he told his friends that he proposed to say a strong deal more in future. He admitted that the speech, however, had created a sensation, and that it did not seem to be the more gratified were his Democratic colleagues on the floor of the Senate.

Even Vice President Fairbanks, who is usually a mild-spoken politician, declared he was so far carried away by the cannon and Fulton speeches as to devote himself to the application of Washington's farewell address. In his speech, and in so saying that there never was a time in the history of the country that this advice of the first term for any President was quite so appropriate at present.

Bourne Elated.

Senator Bourne of Oregon, the originator of term promoter in the Senate and the author of the resolution for a $5,000,000 fund to defeat the President, is about the only one of the President's friends who found any joy in the occasion.

He declares that the united and bitter attacks by all of the Republican candidates for the Presidential nomination upon the President will be nonplussed and that he expects to have been forced to fight him to the open.

The Republican leaders admit that Senator Bourne's account of what occurred at the Ankeny dinner is the most correct one published thus far. Meanwhile Senator Ankeny sent himself up in his committee room to-day to prepare a long statement for the newspapers "back home" explaining that he had no idea what the speakers were to talk about at his dinner and is not responsible for their speeches, as they did not represent his sentiments in any particular.

MILITARY CHIEFS ATTEND

Glittering Gold Lace of Soldiers and Diplomats Make Scene a Dazzling One.

[illegible] House. For brilliancy and for numbers, the affair eclipsed all [illegible] tion's Birthday functions [illegible]

The reception began at 10 o'clock and for more than three hours a continuous line of humanity—old and young, military and civic passed through the Hall of Flags before the Chief Executive and first lady of the Commonwealth. In the adjoining rotunda, Doric Hall, Fifth Regiment Band gave a concert of patriotic music, interpersed with popular numbers that resounded through every corridor of the State House.

It was the most brilliant affair ever held at the State House. Here was gold lace in [illegible] of [illegible] of the Senate and House of Representatives, sat in legislators' chairs and viewed the gay [illegible]

Kissed by Governor's Wife.

Everyone was happy and wore a smile. Perhaps the happiest of them all was little [illegible] Butler, the four-year-old [illegible] daughter of Roger Wolcott [illegible] Mrs. Bertha A. Butler, of No. [illegible] West Street. She had the honor of being kissed by Mrs. Curtis Guild, jr., wife of the Governor, after shaking hands with the Governor, and then [illegible] Governor, noticing the shy look on the [illegible] exhausted subject, ordered her to retire, but she insisted upon remaining until [illegible] the close of the reception.

In the vast army of veterans were Mayor Hibbard, Mayor Wardwell of Cambridge, Mayor [illegible] of Somerville, veterans of the Civil War, [illegible] Mayor [illegible] Lowell, [illegible] corps staff and [illegible] Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army of the Republic, and thirty other military and civic organizations.

LISTEN TO THE VOICE OF REASON

For This New England Climate Wear Soles and Heels of New Rubber from November to May, And the Rubber Heels the Year Around.

Let any one who wears rubbers of any kind, be it the light overshoe or the so-called invisible rubber, stop and consider.

One is an extra weight to lift, the other is not invisible. All are expensive and wear out quickly at the heel.

Have SOLES and HEELS of NEW RUBBER attached to your walking shoes. They are invisible, they wear an entire season, they are no burden, you can't forget them, they carry you safely through slush, damp and cold, they help you to walk gracefully and fearlessly.

All who are exposed to the climatic changes of New England ought to adopt them for their own protection at once.

They cost little when compared with their value. Men's $1.75, ladies' $1.50, attached at all shoe dealers.

Year ago an artist friend of ours had his boot makers attach a pair of O'Sullivan's soles and heels of new rubber to his walking shoes and pair Beacon Arctic Gaiters fitted over his shoes besides.

The Beacon Gaiters, just in the condition he received them, new and unworn, were shown us last week, and the rubber soles and heels were just worn out. If any man wants pair 3-buckle Beacon Gaiters cheap let him call at 31 Milk St.

Rubber soles and heels are the demand of reason, they do the work, they save your nerves. Men and women who work 95% on their nerves should wear them on all their street shoes, and many ladies ought to wear the thin rubber soles and heels on their house slippers. Any one getting them properly attached by a reputable dealer and is not satisfied we will reimburse their loss.

Good rule is from November to May wear Soles and Heels of New Rubber and Rubber Heels the year round.

SPRING BEST TIME TO INVEST IN HOME

Opportunity of Securing Ownership of Real Estate Never Better Than Now.

SUBURBS GROW RAPIDLY

By the Investigator.

This is the time of the year when the man of average means, if not owning a home, should seriously consider the step. Probably he has been thinking about it for some time but is afraid to take the plunge.

He hasn't the money to spare. He figures that he can't afford a home now, and he is not in a position to wait. When he is, he will be able to buy what he wants. He hesitates to spend his money for real estate because he is afraid of the American panic. It is just this above all else that has kept many from obtaining what they want. They don't be a hurry. It is not necessary to be careful about getting a house as it is about getting a wife. When you buy the latter you have to be married. In getting the former you get the value of your money.

Good Chances in Suburbs.

Houses in the suburbs have been selling well for some time past. Some excellent opportunities to get what you want are constantly coming to the front. Just now, during the dull season, is the time to look around and make close attention and avail yourself of the opportunity, the place for you are looking for will be forthcoming.

But when your mind is made up and you are ready to act, there is no hurry. You should appeal to you as one of the suburbs of a city, however, to take the transportation facilities into account, though it may be necessary to walk a few minutes. It is better to walk a few minutes to the city proper than to live in some dead locality where there are no cars or where the service is poor.

The [illegible] care to save this [illegible] to determine [illegible] demands of [illegible].

When this [illegible] before all your plans, it is [illegible] from the city. [illegible] will be a first [illegible] but after a while it will become more of a [illegible]

Change What Is Needed.

The change that it involves is often what is most [illegible] the suburbs, with [illegible] and social surroundings, is ideal. And, [illegible] the change is not one of locality, it is the spirit where your comfort is [illegible].

It is [illegible] to take one out doors. To live [illegible] it is [illegible] and ambitious [illegible] to [illegible] suburban [illegible] is just what the average business [illegible] needs. [illegible] change, the experience [illegible] the [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible].

They are right. It is the only way to live. The man of means who complains that he may have to [illegible] to avoid suburban surroundings thus when he tried [illegible] a large circle [illegible].

Some cannot avail themselves of the privilege and must be content to [illegible] ested districts. But even those deprived of this opportunity can look forward to the hope of suburban life. The social end is no inferior part of it. Many of the people are more inclined to know one another there and form a large circle [illegible] social festivities.

But aside [illegible], the reputed [illegible] of health, [illegible] to be [illegible] to [illegible] tant when the [illegible] is greatly unlimited, and to buy and [illegible] in some [illegible] is [illegible] Boston is about as good a proposition as the average [illegible] now and seize the opportunity.

Growth in Dorchester.

The streets of [illegible] Lawrence avenue, Dorchester, known as Westville, Bloom, Lenox and [illegible] are rapidly building up. [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

HUB CHAUFFEUR WINS HEART OF ALBANY HEIRESS.

Miss Mary Joyce and "Jack" Covart Are Linked by Cupid.

WEDDING EXPECTED SOON

Girl, Society Pet and Possessor of Millions, Chooses Employe of Hunnewells.

MEETING WAS ACCIDENTAL

Friendship Between the Two Young People Soon Ripens into Love.

WHEN Miss Mary Joyce of Albany, N. Y., heiress to mill lions, pet of society, athlete and graduate of Vassar tripped down the broad stone of the proud ancestral home to greet H. Holis Hunnewell and his fair wife, who had been Mr. Arthur T. Kemp, she stepped right into the heart of handsome John Covart of Malden, Mr. Hunnewell's chauffeur.

That was a year and a half ago.

To day one of the most delightful and unusual romances has so far developed that Boston, Wellesley and Albany friends of the young society belle declare she will soon give her hand in marriage to the dashing young automobilist.

His Parents Not Rich.

Did circumstances ever so combine some call it fate, to fan the flame of love as they have since that momentous October day in 1906, when "Jack" Covart drove the splendid limousine car of the Hunnewells to the door of the stately stone mansion in Adams?

Just the very next day after they had met pretty Miss Mary Joyce flitted down the steps of the grand mansion she owns, for her parents are both dead, and came the first of the big automobiles he ever saw, and driven by the handsome chauffeur a prime factor in the voyage of Mr. Hunnewell.

And that is the event which she has chosen as all the happiness in the world, even though it may mean

THE AMERICAN STILL GAINS ALONE

The week just ended shows the AMERICAN still the only one of Boston's four leading Newspapers making advertising gains over last year. The following figures give comparisons with the corresponding week of 1907.

1st Boston American	LOCAL ADVERTISING ALONE	Gained	LINES 8,921
2nd Boston	ALL KINDS OF ADVERTISING	Lost	5,320
3rd Boston	ALL KINDS OF ADVERTISING	Lost	23,800
4th Boston	ALL KINDS OF ADVERTISING	Lost	24,640

The American's increase proves the value of its columns to advertisers.
Home circulation guarantees it.

HOMELESS PIANOS

BIG BARGAINS

This week 47 beautiful pianos will find their way to our sacrifice floor. These exquisite instruments once had good homes, the best of homes, but during the late financial troubles their owners parted with them for a little—a very little—of the much-needed cash, and now they are homeless waiting for you to come up here and get them. It will not cost you much, and if you like you may get them on the fairest of terms. You will find all the finest makes in this lot—new and second hand.

BROUILLET'S WIFE TELLS HER STORY

"George Was Out of His Head," She Declares of Husband Charged With Assault.

GIVES ALL TO CHILDREN

Even while moving her property away from her husband's home at No. 262 Commonwealth avenue yesterday evening, the scene of the sensational assault Thursday night, Mrs. Jessie A. Brouillet insisted that her husband could not have been himself when he is declared to have wielded a hatchet, striking James L. Luce, her brother.

"Because I will devote myself to my babies," she said. "What harm could there be in that?"

It was a remarkable interview and versation that came to light as the result of recent bad blood between the husband, Dr. Brouillet, attorney Wilson, who assisted herself and declared husband. Brouillet was superintending the moving of the household goods.

"George is not himself, that is perhaps the charitable thing for me to say concerning the events of the early part of last night," said Mrs. Brouillet.

"All I have to live for now are my two babies," she said.

Gave All for Children.

"No one on earth can impeach my motives. I have worked as few women have worked to maintain position, home and reputation, and no one knows it well. So does everybody. It was because of this that I not attempt to say anything in my own behalf concerning the suit now pending against me, nor will I say anything in answer to the charges made by my husband's counsel. I would merely answer them and after that put them to rest, and efforts to harm me. I have left without support, because I will devote myself to my babies, and they are now my comforts. Why should they not? Is there anything wrong?

"I shall not say to have the whole truth known. I have done my very best and I will not submit to charges of reproach for my actions to mean upon my labors. I was glad of an opportunity to bring them by relating the circumstances connected with the case. I should put in here."

Came to Hub Twelve Years Ago.

A friend of the family who has been acquainted with Dr. Brouillet for twelve years and with Mrs. Brouillet for six years, said:

"Dr. Brouillet came here a dozen years ago, established a splendid practice, being a very skilful dentist, and his patrons were from the families of Boston.

"About six years ago he and Miss Luce married. The bride proved to be educated, a woman of good and a great student and judge of character. Two pretty babies resulted from the marriage.

Affected By Panic.

"The doctor made money and speculated. Very likely the late panic affected him financially. It has been agreed that something was on his mind.

"During the excitement of the other night when the house was used and pedestrians called, I went down stairs. I do not pass upon the time. One, the husband's version, was that the Luce brothers coughed him and pushed him aside until in a temper he struck the first blow, which was the hatchet he had used in beating off the Luces. The other version was the wife's story that her husband would not do such things. Both cannot be true. Friends, indifferent, and one of them believed it."

Dr. G. A. BROUILLET. Mrs. G. A. BROUILLET.

Principals in Marital Tangle That Wrecked Back Bay Home

With her husband in jail charged with attacking her brother with a hatchet, wife of dentist declares she will devote herself hereafter to her babies.

"George was not himself," the defence she makes of her husband's alleged actions.

ROME FORMS CLUB AFTER HUB MODEL

Young Men's Catholic Association Busy on Plans for Reunion.

Before a large gathering of Catholic ladies and gentlemen, brought together in Boston College Hall by the Young Men's Catholic Association, the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College and of the association, consummated the association for its good work. Father Gasson stated that there had been started in Rome a movement to form a "Young Men's Association" in Roman youths. The Pope showed great interest in the work. Those to whom this task was assigned reported that a model for such an organization might be found in Boston in the Young Men's Catholic Association. A request was sent to Father Gasson for the laws, literature, etc., of the association. Father Gasson responded to the request. He said that the near future may see in Rome a confederation modeled on the lines of the Young Men's Catholic Association of Boston, duplicating its good work.

Everything points to a magnificent success of the Twenty-ninth reunion of the association, to be held in Symphony Hall March 2. The reception will be tendered by John E. Riley, is as follows:

B. & A. ADDS TRAINS; ALTERS SCHEDULES

Following the demand by the people of Wellesley and other places along the lines for better service, at the monster mass meeting held recently, the Boston & Albany Railroad makes many important changes in local schedules to-day which its patrons should find satisfactory. Several trains will be added on the various lines and some of the trains will start on an earlier schedule.

The new time table affects the service between Boston and the Worcesters, Riverside, South Framingham, Worcester, Springfield, Holyoke and Springfield.

C. C. Ferris of Wellesley, president of the Catchpost Company, who was one of the leaders in the movement for better service, said to the American reporter last night:

"The new schedule announced by the Boston & Albany is much needed. I have no doubt it will satisfy everybody if the changes are put in as they should be. It is the best time arrangement we have ever had."

OUT OF BASEBALL GAME.

Woburn, Feb. 22.—William Rapp, of North Woburn, well known as a baseball player, met with an accident, while employed in Factory D, of the American Hide & Leather Company at Woburn, which may put him out of the game. Three fingers were badly hurt.

12 COMRADES DIED DURING THE YEAR

Ninety comrades attended the annual dinner of the Forty third Massachusetts Regiment Association yesterday afternoon at the American House, Boston. Comrade Nason, of Abington, was elected president; George E. Merrill, Phoenix, Ariz., and Charles M. Cook, Boston, vice presidents; Lieut. Col. Henry Lee Shattuck, Boston, and Thomas R. Appleton, Boston, treasurer. During the year the association lost twelve members by death. Robert Torrey acted as toastmaster.

MAYOR TO ATTEND SOUTH END MEETING

Mayor Hibbard will attend the general meeting of the South End Improvement Society in the hall of the Lincoln High School, West Newton street, to-morrow evening.

—Auto-Vivisection—

Do You Deliberately Torture Yourself Alive By Neglecting Your Stomach?

Remedy Free For the Asking.

A great outcry has arisen during the last few years against scientists who sacrifice animals' pain in the interests of science. How many people are there, however, who needlessly torture themselves by causing their stomachs to go on strike? Dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, sleeplessness, loss of vim and energy are the inevitable result.

Are you one of these?

Why not give your stomach a rest? Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will relieve your stomach of all its work and do it for you. They are compounded of the very elements and in the work which the stomach performs in a state of normal health, namely pepsin, malt diastase and like ingredients.

Dr. Richardson, in writing a thesis on treatment of dyspepsia and indigestion, closes his remarks by saying, "For those suffering from acid dyspepsia, shaving from heartburnings, or for flatulent dyspepsia shown by gas on stomach, dizziness, heart trouble and difficult breathing, as well as for all other forms of stomach trouble, the safest treatment is to take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal. I prefer them because they contain no harmful drugs, but are composed of valuable digestives, which act promptly upon the food eaten. I never knew a case of indigestion or even chronic dyspepsia which Stuart's Tablets would not reach."

Cheap cathartic medicines claiming to cure dyspepsia and indigestion can have no effect whatever in actively digesting the food, and to call any cathartic medicine a cure for indigestion is a misnomer.

Every druggist in the United States and Canada sells Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and they are not only the safest and most successful, but the most scientific of any treatment for indigestion and stomach troubles.

Price 50c a box at all druggists.

DISCUSS CHARTER BILL WEDNESDAY

Hiseen and Auerbach Anti-Monopoly Measures Also Scheduled for Hearing.

Mayor Hibbard's bill for a revision of Boston's charter and several other bills on the same subject will be given their first hearings Wednesday before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs of the Legislature. The hearings are expected to be drawn out for several days.

The bills presented by Thomas L. Hisgen and Joshua F. Auerbach to prevent monopolies and the restraint of competition in trade will be given their first hearing afternoon before the Joint Judiciary Committee.

Other important measures which will be discussed before the various committees this week are as follows:

Grade Crossing Signals.

Monday—On publishing false statements in advertisements for sale of real estate; to regulate and control grade crossings.

Tuesday—For a tax on street railways; Governor's address on license and police; to regulate and control the sale of arms in the civil or Spanish wars, or organizations; to license hospitals; to amend the mayor's liability law to authorize and direct the purchase of certain land in Roxbury for a garage; to control or regulate the use of motor vehicles; for the revision and codification of the laws on motor vehicles; to limit the hours of labor to eight hours in a day and eight hour day, to regulate the sale of firearms, to abolish each commissioner's license.

Milk Question Hearing.

Wednesday—For a commission to investigate the milk question; to control and regulate the sale of oleomargarine; to amend the law relative to the insurance rates, to increase the powers of the Boston Finance Commission; to amend the charter of Boston relative to the appointment of the auditing department; to amend the charter of Boston relative to the appointment of the auditing department; to amend the charter of Boston relative to the appointment of the auditing department
